“EXPLORING PHOTOGRAPHIC PERSPECTIVES OF TURKISH CHILDREN”

Following the exhibition that reflected the physical and social environments of children through the photographs they have taken within the project of “Voices of Children” as an international project that helps the interaction of social and cultural lives of children through photography, Dr. Ian Brown and Dr. Ros Westbrook from University of Wollongong, Faculty of Education in Australia, as partners of the project, have given a seminar entitled “Exploring Photographic Perspectives of Turkish Children” to the 4th year students of Interior Architecture and Environmental Design at Izmir University of Economics on 3 December 2010. They presented the photographs taken within the ‘Voices of Children’ project and conveyed information about what a photograph would tell in terms of social, cultural and personal aspects, making the students gain different perspectives.
